A New Bridge of Sighs.

Our most polygamous,
Short in the breath,
Frightfully bigamous,
Gone to his death.

Turn not away from him,
Seeming to touch;
Go near—pray for him—
Married so much.

Think of his fathers-in-law,
Two hundred brothers-in-law,
Three hundred sisters-in-law,
Fifty odd mothers-in-law,
A huge family.

Stuck polygamy;
Think of their daily life,
Full of domestic strife,
Cautions and squabbles;
Think of the tears and cries,
Then try to Ann Elize
Turn from their feelings.

Turn not away from him,
Seeming to touch;
Go near—pray for him—
Married so much.

Oh! this is pitiful!
Sad house with widows full,
Husband and no wife!
Bachelors think of it!
Go near the brink of it!
Now you dare!

Still with his bigamy,
Nick-named polygamy,
Leave him rest,
Cross his hands humbly,
As praying dumbly.
Over his breast,
Owning his weakness,
The poor erring creature;
And leaving with meekness
His mantle to—

VARIETY.

A woman in the suburbs has named one of her hens "Macduff," so that it may lay on.

Next to his art, E. L. Davenport adored pretty women next to his art.

An editor says that when he was in prison for libeling a justice of the peace, he was requested by the jailor "to give the prison a puff."

A Michigan father writes to the faculty of Yale: "What is the excuse for a year?"

He cost it everything extra if my son wants to learn to read and write as well as row a boat."

"Go out, young man; she's not here," said a Pennsylvania minister in the midst of his sermon, to a youth whom he saw standing hesitatingly in the doorway.

A Montana justice of the Peace doesn't spurn any man who marries a cock. He says: "Any cock handy—hitch—six dollars!"

"All this there is to it.

A Minnesota sheriff carried a bullet in his head ten years, and when he removed it recently, he became foolish. They are looking for some one to shoot him again.

"It was pitched without," said the clergyman, and an old base-ball player, who had been calmly slumbering, awoke with a start, and yelled "Foul." The first base came down from the chair and put him out.

"Why is this called Jacob's ladder?" asked a charming woman as he and she were going up the steepest portion of the Mount Washington railway. "Because," he replied, with a look that emphasized his words, "there are angels ascending occasionally." He squeezed her hand.

It wasn't homesickness that made Conkling retire behind the wheel-hoop the second day out, and stand on tip-toe every time the screw came out of the water and dip his elbows into the rail and hump up his back, and hang on to his temple, and gulp, "O Utena! O, Utena county! O, my!"—Boston Globe.

"Why don't you speak distinctly?" cried a passenger to a brakeman who announced the names of stations in an utterly unintelligible manner. "I can't understand a word you say." "What's that to me?" responded the brakeman. "You mean, 'You mean, 'there are angels ascending occasionally.'"

"You speak of a mixed crowd," observed the opposing lawyer, "now what do you mean by a mixed crowd?" "If I might venture a definition," politely interposed the witness. "I should say that an Irish row might be called 'a mixed crowd.'"

"The lawyer gave up the examination."—Chicago Journal.

The modern child is pretty quizzical. This time she lives in St. Louis, and reads her Bible with thoughtfulness, but makes her own commentary. "Did they take a piece right out of Adam to make his wife?" "Yes, darling."

"What's right out of him?" And wasn't he always sickly afterward?"—Christian Register.

He told the editor that he had read proof for twenty years, and he obtained a situation. When he spelled "introduction" with a big "i" and with a "k," and "Jehovah" with a little "g," the editor dipped him in the ink.

"What's right out of him?" And wasn't he always sickly afterward?"—Christian Register.

Said a Poughkeepsie alderman to a Kingston alderman after a Centennial introduction: "Where's Hall?" "What Hall," said the Kingston alderman. "An alderman," replied Poughkeepsie. "Oh," said Kingston, "he's a wise John."

"What John?" said Poughkeepsie. "Demjohn," said Kingston, and then both crawled into the hold of a canal boat and died.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.

Young America is advancing. Here is the evidence. Youth of six years—Papa, you must get me some marbles." Fond Parent: "Marbles, my son; do you know how to play marbles?" He waited until the next night for his answer. Youth displaying a pocket inflated with rattling marbles: "Ah, ha! I see there!" Youth: "Marbles! Don't know how to play?" Papa: "Where did you get 'em?" Youth: "Skinned a feller!"—Boston Traveller.

A New Hampshire editor says: Some time ago an aged man who had just lost his wife came into our sanctum, and, with tears standing in his eyes, enlarged the memory of the deceased, and asked us to record the death in our next issue. "And," said he, "while you are about it, make an item about one of my Brahms, here laying an egg measuring seven keepees." "Oh," said Kingston, "he's a wise John."
